The international project STEP UP - "Stepping up the European cooperation and communication among Public & Private organizations for the PROTECTION of posted worker's rights" is focused on the phenomenon of transnational posting of workers and aims to verify the application of recent European regulations in the field of labour migration, entrepreneurial behaviour and the concrete role played by inspection bodies.

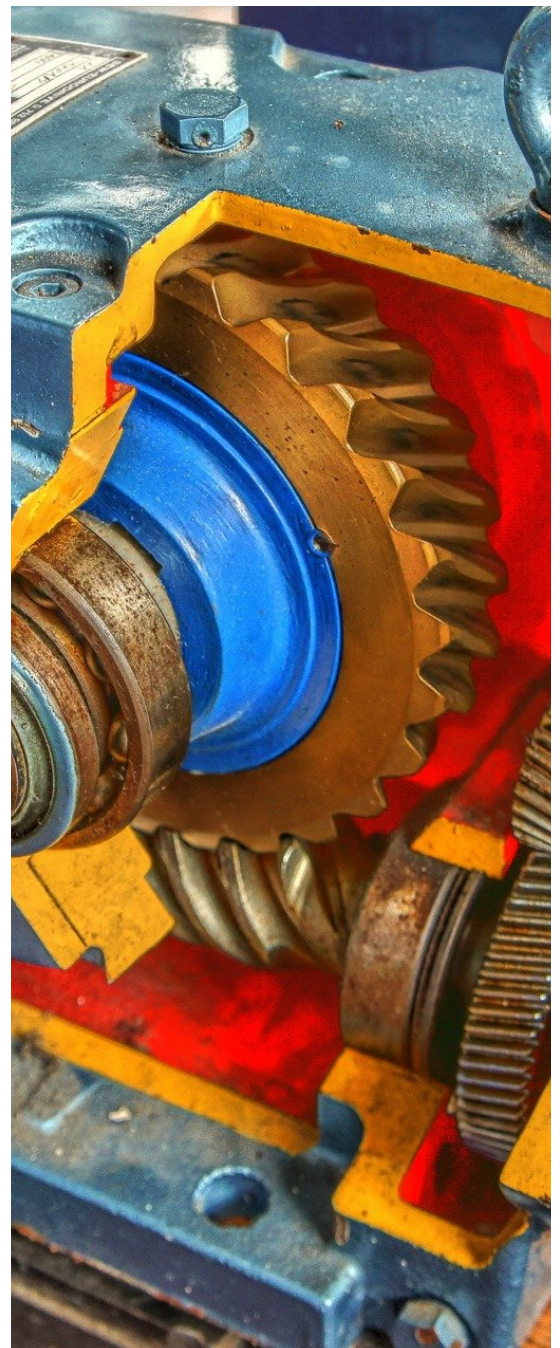

Step Up PROTECTION is managed by universities in 5 European countries and takes place between 2020 and 2022.

The idea of the project starts from the recent interventions of the European legislator in the field of transnational posting: interventions aimed at avoiding the low-cost posting of staff in the transnational field, with dangerous forms of competition for posted workers.

As the first part of the event was more focused on institutional interventions and discussions on data collection and activities of the research project team, the second part provided an interesting and constructive discussion between trade unions, academic and inspectorate representatives regarding their take on the future of European legislation on transnational posting.
